

Handprint Bunnies

Instructions:

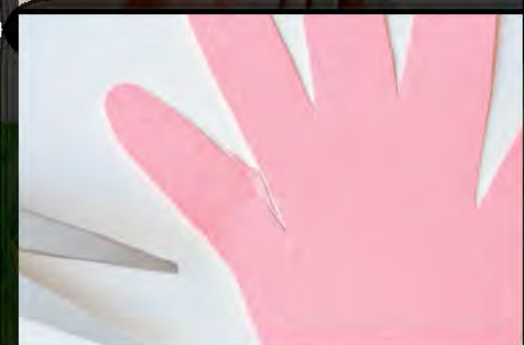

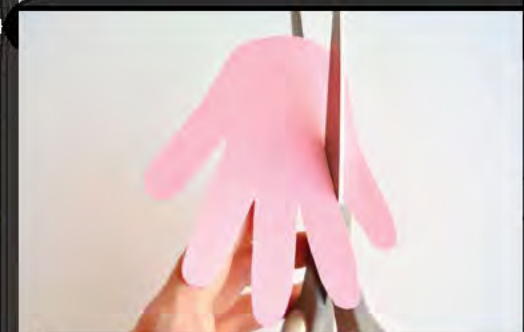

1 Start by tracing a handprint – BUT you have to make the handprint a little fatter than you normally would. If you trace tightly around the fingers, the ears and arms will be super skinny.

2 Cut out the handprint. Make sure you have a V at the bottom between each finger (rather than a curve).

3 This next part is optional, but it really helps make the bunny more proportional.

4 Cut a small slit beside the baby finger. You want the bottom of the cut to line up with the bottom of the space beside the thumb.

5 Once you cut the slit, the baby finger will look a bit crooked. Feel free to trim that baby finger a little to fix the shape.

6 Next, you can fold down the baby finger towards the center to make one of the bunny arms.

7 Then fold down the thumb towards the center for the other bunny arm. Fold them so the two hands "touch" in the middle.

8 Cut off the middle finger so you're left with two finger "bunny ears".

9 Use a marker, pen, pencil or crayon to draw the pink parts of the ears. Then draw an oval for the rabbit's nose.

10 Using a black pen or marker, draw the rest of the face - eyes, whiskers and mouth.

11 Finally draw two little paws at the bottom of the handprint to make the bunny's feet.

12 Your paper bunny is complete!
